E. ESTABLISHMENT AND FURNISHING OF SERVICE

1. Application for Service

Application for service must be made on the Company's standard form, which becomes a contract when accepted in writing by the Company or upon establishment of service. The Subscriber may be required to pay in advance all charges for the first billing period and connection charge if applicable. The conditions of such contracts are subject to all provisions of this and other applicable tariffs. Requests for additional service may be made orally, if provided in the original contract, and no advance payment will be required. A move within the exchange area is not considered to terminate the contract and orders for such may be made orally.

2. Telephone Numbers

Telephone numbers are assigned to the Company by the Federal Communications Commission, and in turn, are assigned to customers for the establishment of telephone service. The use of a telephone number by a customer does not establish property rights to that number, nor does it guarantee service through any particular central office. The Company retains full responsibility for numbers until such time as a number is transferred to another provider through a local number portability agreement. As such the Company reserves the right to change numbers when it is necessary to continue adequate delivery of service. When existing service is continued for a new Customer, the telephone number assigned to the former Customer may be retained by the new Customer only: (a) if the former Customer consents and properly notifies the Company in writing; and (b) if arrangements acceptable to the Company are made by the new Customer to pay all outstanding charges against the service to the Company.

Voice mailboxes can store and save messages in differing degrees, depending on the level of service ordered by the subscriber. Credit for service interruption will be provided if service is interrupted for a period exceeding twenty four (24) hours. The credit shall be the monthly amount for service divided by 30 days times the number of days that service is continually interrupted.

The Telephone Company is not responsible for lost or dropped messages. Periodically, the Telephone Company will update the software supporting voice mail service. During this period, voice mail will not be operational. This period will not exceed 24 hours; therefore, credit for service not received will not be allowed for regular software upgrades.

Voice mail can be programmed to answer a subscriber's telephone line after a set number of rings. A subscriber has access to a voice mailbox by dialing a seven- or ten-digit access number followed by a personal identification code. The subscriber can then retrieve messages and save them or erase them. The subscriber can also program a personal greeting that will play when voice mail answers a telephone line.

The standard mailbox features include forwarding to the mailbox on no answer (subscriber selectable for 2 to 5 rings), forwarding to the mailbox on busy line, and a new message indication (stutter dial tone).

Subscribers using call waiting may not choose to have calls forwarded to voice mail on a busy signal. These subscribers will be interrupted with a call waiting tone burst for as many rings as the subscriber selects for no answer forwarding. If the subscriber does not answer the call waiting tone, the second caller will be forwarded to voice mail.
