Ladies and Gentlemen of the Commission:

We, (wife and I) just got our gas bill for our home, and with it was a notice that the company was petitioning you for an increase. Now we're not so naive as to believe that stagnant pricing exists anywhere, but a 300% increase is obvious thievery.

I called our server, and was advised that it has been some time since they've had an increase. According to Wall Street, the energy sector has been one of the most successful of all. It appears to me that they are trying to get a piece of the Gasoline action. What the heck, it worked for them, why not?

I suggested that a 2-3% annual increase would seem more reasonable. It would be more logical, and would match my annual Social Security increase. I would certainly be interested in their earnings per share over the last 10 years to see if they could justify 300%.

UTILITY COMPLAINT FORM

I think we are reasonable people, but we are also limited in income. Now, we can't blame the gas company for our financial situation, but I can be reasonable certain that if they had been in financial difficulties, they would not have waited until a 300 or even a 200% increase became necessary.

Give them 2-3% with our blessing, but please don't be a party to making it harder for low income or the need to survive. I doubt whether any of you on the board have had to count pennies to survive. Count your blessings instead, and give a break to those of us who do.

Very truly yours,

Bruce E. Klapp
