RECEIVED

With the exception of the definition of "Calendar Year" I believe the Trico proposed net metering schedule should be approved as is. The current calendar year definition:

Calendar Year: The Calendar Year is defined as May 1 through April 30, for the purpose of determining the billing credit for the balance of any credit due in excess of amounts owed by the customer to the Cooperative.

This definition of calendar year eliminates the benefit of conserving energy during the winter and spring months. Thus discouraging the installation of alternate energy sources such as, photovoltaic's. I believe a settlement month of fall or actual calendar year would be more advantageous and encouraging for individuals and businesses to pursue installation of alternate energy sources.
