Fact of life: Nice things cost more

Editor:

I'm appalled that [Litchfield Park] Mayor Schoaf makes our community sound like a bunch of spoiled, self-centered children. To state that "we shouldn't be penalized because we have large yards, large parks with a lot of grass or swimming pools," is no better than any other irresponsible child claiming that repercussions for their poor choices are unfair.

Part of the choice of having nice things is the responsibility for taking care of them. Expensive cars, large homes, fancy toys... they're all choices. Nice things cost more to take care of.

There have been no water price increases in eight years. Considering we live in an area with diminishing resources, that's an incredible feat. The fees are fair. If you can't afford it, make better choices.
