RATE CASE OPPOSED

As a retiree, on fixed income, I do not believe a rate increase during these economically depressed times are in the best interest of the utility users. The information being sent by "TEP" that the increase will be 12.5% for 812kwh is misleading. My average kwh use is over 730 kwh/mo. AND, that was with more than 40 days away from my home, during that time period. In addition I have added a number of insulation measures including a new air conditioner and furnace. Furthermore, there are only two retired adults who live at my address and our life style predisposes us to conservative use of utilities.

I wondering what a family of 4, who lives here 12 months of the year would need to pay with this rate increase?

I would also point out that TEP is passing off all their business expenses to the utility holders. Example: "Environmental compliance cost recovery" So if TEP violates a pollution law, and is fined they can pass the cost of these finds on to the utility users. AND some executive will receive a bonus for this "wise move" Come on, lets get serious.
