Nature of Complaint:

 REFERRED FROM EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR'S OFFICE *****

For too many years investor owned power companies have been allowed to increase costs at will to assure investor returns. They had little to worry about as overseers routinely implemented their recommendations. This loose oversight allowed a mentality of anything goes as our mistakes will be covered by the rate payers. Now one of the most exciting innovations in Arizona is under attack. I refer to roof top solar commonly installed by homeowners. Why this was not brought to the valley of the sun sooner is now clear, that reason is the resistance of existing electrical power companies. It took mandates from the Federal Government to force the power companies to accept and actually lure homeowners to embrace roof top solar panels. After publicizing and encouraging individuals the gotcha moment is near! Suddenly the power companies see an epiphany. Now they say these systems threaten their fat profit picture. Why how dare these individuals threaten our investors. Forget the fact that we encouraged our rate payers to fund energy conservation projects. Forget the fact that we actually paid them and assured that their projects were feasible by reviewing their designs and approving the installations. Forget that these ratepayers, largely middle class or retirees, are struggling in a weak economy. Now we want to prove to these rate payers that they were ignorant and stupid since they believed what the power companies promised. If there was ever a time to overturn the cozy relationship between the power companies, investors, and regulators now is the time.
