Comments: I am strongly opposed to incentives for rooftop solar installations on residential properties as the solar panels are not cost effective and disproportionately place the burden of cost on lower income families. Studies have shown that these rooftop panels are much more dangerous to the environment in the long run than any benefits they offer now. Uneducated residents are bamboozled into these programs by unscrupulous businesses looking to make a quick buck. If residents want to install solar panels they should be: Out of the sight of neighboring properties Funded at the homeowners expense The cost of the panels must have a surcharge for the disposition of hazardous waste Not supported by utility incentives Homeowners must pay utilities for the infrastructure required to support the panels redistribution
